Looking for Information on McClellan AFB's Environmental Cleanup Activities?

INFO-REPOSITORY-II-HANDOUT.CDR LCT 11.18.98 SAC

Visit the Information Repository

The Air Force has documented every step of the cleanup process:

- Investigations
- Proposed plans
- Decisions on cleanup strategies
- Design and remedial actions
- Operations and maintenance

McClellan AFB Environmental Management's office houses the documentation for the cleanup program. These documents are stored in the Information Repository (IR).

You can call for a copy of a document, or you can visit the IR. The location and phone number are shown on the map to the right.

For your convenience, the base has placed a list of all IR documents on McClellan AFB Environmental Management's web site located at:

http://www.mcclellan.af.mil/EM

Key IR documents are available on the web site as well. Libraries with web access are shown on the map to the right. For tips on accessing the Web from home, please see the back of this flyer.

Web information

What is the Web?

The Web is a means for different organizations (and individuals!) to communicate all over the world. Each organization establishes a presence called a "web site" on a computer called a "server," which is linked to other servers on the Internet.

How can I get on the Web?

You must have a modem, a subscription with an Internet service provider, and a program on your computer called a "Web browser." The browser could be Netscape, Microsoft Explorer, or the browser from your Internet service provider. Open your browser, and you are on the information superhighway!

What will I find at EM's Web Site?

Our web site has information about EM's mission, vision, and the scope of environmental impacts at McClellan AFB. Key documents, such as the Base Realignment and Closure Cleanup Plan update and Community Relations Plan update, are available for you to read and/or download. You can also find out about the innovative cleanup technologies and the Restoration Advisory Board, as well as view past issues of our newsletter Environmental Action Update.
